Does the profession need to move away from typical production statistics? Not necessarily, but many people find these stats to be confusing and make them balk at hiring a photographer. So, before you start sending out resumes, looking at employment statistics can be an eye-opener. You may feel like you're not getting the job simply because there are so many photographers who can do the job and the average income for a photographer is so low. After you talk to a number of professionals, you may find that you are a much better candidate than the 'average' shooter. The good news is that your statistics will show that you're better than the average and they will be prepared to hire you. When looking at employment statistics, two things to look at: 1) median income, and 2) labor force participation rate. The first one is easy to understand; it's the median income of the local photographers. I'm not saying this is the top income-earning photographer (in fact, most certainly is not), it's the total income on average, and it's a reasonable number to look at. The second statistic is slightly more abstract, but it still gives a great idea on who is being hired as a photographer. This statistic gives you a picture of the total number of people who are working, which is just as important. It's not the number of photographers who make minimum wage that creates such a low average income; the employment statistics for the average photographer will show you that. Your employment statistics have a number on them that tells you something about the total number of people working, which gives an image of who is being hired. Numbers are numbers. Don't let them scare you away, or make you think that you're not worth anything. Tell yourself that it will give you a great base to add to your qualifications, and you'll be a stronger candidate than most. Don't take my word for it; the numbers will speak for themselves. Here are the numbers for the average annual salary of a photographer in the United States, based on www.photographyfirms.com and www.stratfordphotographer.com. Be it the way of government, only some of us may have the privilege of burning an incense statue of Gawd on a special solemnity, but there's no excused for not doing it according to the dictates of the Levit

77 F.3d 479 65 USLW 2513, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 99,025 Larry G. STRZALKA, Plaintiff-Appellee, v. SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, Defendant-Appellant. No. 94-2088. United States Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit. Submitted Feb. 14, 1996. Decided Feb. 20, 1996. Appeal from the United States District Court for the District of Minnesota; Paul A. Magnuson, U.S.D.C. Judge. Mark Daniel Swartz, Washington, DC, argued, for defendant-appellant. David P. Smith, St. Paul, MN, argued, for plaintiff-appellee. Before WOLLMAN, MAGILL, and HANSEN, Circuit Judges. PER CURIAM. 1 The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) appeals from the district court's grant of Larry G. Strzalka's petition for attorneys' fees under the Equal Access to Justice Act (EAJA). See 28 U.S.C. § 2412(d)(1)(A). For reversal, the SEC argues that (1) the district court lacked statutory authority to order the fees granted and (2) the district court abused its discretion in awarding the fees. 2 On September 26, 1992, Strzalka filed a complaint against the SEC in the district court, alleging that the SEC failed to comply with its statutory obligations under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and the Administrative Procedure Act, breached its common law fiduciary duty to Strzalka, and violated its own regulations. After dismissing the case for lack of jurisdiction and granting the SEC's motion to vacate, the district court denied Strzalka's motion for attorneys' fees, concluding that Strzalka's application was not a "prevailing party" within the meaning of EAJA. On January 6, 1995, the court awarded attorneys' fees. The SEC then moved for reconsideration, raising the issue for the first time that Strzalka's application was not timely under EAJA. The district court denied the motion for reconsideration, finding that the SEC had waived its right to seek reconsideration. The SEC then moved for the district court to certify its January 6 order for inter
